PRI buys remaining lease of Rewald company's office

Thomas Hayes, administrative controller for the bankrupt firm of Bishop, Baldwin, Rewald, Dillingham and Wong, said yesterday he has sold the company's remaining 10-month lease for Grosvenor Center office space to Pacific Resources, Inc., the anchor tenant in the building, for $28,000.

The 6,500 square feet of 28th floor space includes the former personal office of Bishop Baldwin founder Ronald Rewald, who decorated it with an operating waterfall.

A spokeswoman for PRI said she believed the energy company would dispose of the waterfall. The floor area will be used for general office space for PRI, which occupies floors immediately above.

Hayes said he hopes to raise more money for creditors of Bishop Baldwin by selling off the defunct company's office furnishings and equipment.
